

MRS. J. C. RAMSDALL DIED IN CALIFORNIA

Was One of the Pioneer Women of Arizona Living Years in Globe

(Globe Belt.)
The many friends of Mrs. J. C. Ramsdall, who, until five years ago, was a well known resident of this city, will learn with the deepest regret of her death yesterday noon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. A. Lucas, at Cucamonga, California.

News of her death was received in a telegram by City Engineer B. F. Van Wageningen, a grandson of Mrs. Ramsdall, yesterday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Van Wageningen of this city, who left here for Cucamonga Monday morning, arrived there about two hours after Mrs. Ramsdall died.

Besides Mrs. W. A. Lucas of Cucamonga, Cal., Mrs. Ramsdall leaves another daughter, Mrs. G. S. Van Wageningen of this city, and three grandchildren, B. F. Wageningen and Miss Sue Van Wageningen of this city, and J. H. Wageningen of Los Angeles. Mrs. Ramsdall is also survived by two brothers, Charles Stevens and Isaac Stevens of Clifton, and one sister, Mrs. Richardson Hudson of Silver City, N. M.

The funeral will be held at the home of Mrs. W. A. Lucas in Cucamonga and interment will be in Los Angeles, where the husband of the deceased was taken for burial about twelve years ago.

Mrs. J. C. Ramsdall came to this city to live about twenty-nine years ago, and during her residence here she made a host of firm friends. She was about 80 years old.

Mrs. Ramsdall is quite well known in Douglas, having resided here for a time with her daughter, Mrs. Lucas.

TRIAL OF BROUGHTON BRANDENBURG CALLED

NEW YORK, June 15.—The case of Broughton Brandenburg, the magazine writer, was called for trial today in the criminal branch of the supreme court. The charge upon which Brandenburg is to be tried is one of grand larceny in the second degree.

The charge hinges upon the sale by Brandenburg to a New York newspaper of an article purporting to have been written and signed by the late Grover Cleveland, but which, it was charged, was not genuine.

The published article caused a lot of talk in the heat of the recent presidential campaign, as the substance of it consisted of Mr. Cleveland's alleged reasons why Mr. Taft should be elected to the presidency. Upon its publication doubts were expressed by Mrs. Cleveland and by intimate friends and associates of the late president as to the genuineness of the article. An investigation was started and the result was that Brandenburg was indicted. When the case was first called for trial last February it was found that Brandenburg had forfeited his bail and left the city. Subsequently he was found in San Francisco and returned to New York for trial.

In the meanwhile his troubles were added to by his connection with the famous divorce case in St. Louis, in which Mr. Cabanne obtained a divorce from his wife, naming Brandenburg as co-respondent.

EXERCISES REMARKABLE POWER OVER MANIAC
To be placed in the Phoenix insane asylum after having been violently insane for several days, except while under the influence of a hypnotist, George Brittingham, a Yavapai miner, was brought to Phoenix yesterday morning by an officer.

Brittingham's screams while he was in Prescott jail attracted much pity. Physicians and friends tried to soothe him, but he refused to stop screaming. The Prescott jail is in the center of the city, and for blocks the people could hear his piteous cries until he was quieted in a rather mysterious manner.

Hearing these screams, a young man named Ray Close, volunteered his services to Sheriff Smith in Prescott. In a few minutes' conversation with the stricken miner he succeeded in his mission and for over eight hours thereafter the screams of the man ceased, and to all intents and purposes a mind cure was effected and self control established.

It appears to be a clear case of hypnotism, and considering the violent nature of the man in custody considerable comment of a favorable nature has been heard of not only mental treatment, but that given by the young man who performed the service from motives purely of a sympathetic character.

Close is a young man, in the 20s, and is an assistant at the Ruffner derelict establishment in Prescott. In a statement he said he is not a hypnotist, but possesses a keen knowledge of the instincts of the insane, having been an inmate of the Arizona insane asylum at Phoenix and has made a study also of the powers of hypnotism.

GETTING THE FACTS

The pretty girl readjusted her pompadour and settled back against the young man's shoulder comfortably.

"I've been thinking, George," she began. "It just occurred to me today to wonder why you fell in love with me. Why did you?"

The young man looked surprised. "Why," he began, "what a funny question! Because I couldn't help it, I suppose."

"Do be serious," protested the pretty girl, reprovingly. "I really want to know. It must have been for some trait of my character or something like that and I—I want to keep it up you know. Why did you?"

"Well," said the young man, "you were the prettiest girl I—"

"Oh, George," burst out the young woman. "That makes me feel just dreadful! To think you care nothing for me except for my complexion and eyelashes! I suppose when they vanish you'll hate me and hunt up some one prettier!"

"You won't lose your eyelashes!" said the young man, comfortingly. "I don't see why you should feel that way. Aren't you glad that I think you good looking?"

"You don't understand a bit!" said the pretty girl. "I am disappointed in you! Why, you ought to care for me because you think I have a sweet smile."

"Come back here where you were."

ture or a fine character or a good influence or—or something like that? Something that will last! Don't you?"

"Oh, you're all that and then some!" insisted the young man.

The young woman drew away. "George," she said, "sometimes I think I'll never be happy together. You don't comprehend me. Here you treat this matter so lightly when it really is so important! I suppose if I had been homely you wouldn't have loved me. Don't deny it! Would you?"

"But you aren't," persisted the young man. "I can't imagine you that way."

"But if I had been? Suppose I had a snub nose and freckles and horrid hair? Would it have made a difference?"

"Nothing could make a difference," insisted the young man, heroically. "Nothing!"

"But I wouldn't have been the same in that case," persisted the young woman with a worried frown. "You wouldn't have bothered to find out if I had a lovely nature and all that. It just makes me heartsick! It shows that you don't really care about me, the real me, at all. Don't you see?"

"Indeed, I don't see," cried the young man. "You've got me all mixed up. Why, I like you because you are you."

"But I wouldn't be if I were homely," said the young woman, dabbing her eyes with her handkerchief. "It shows your affection isn't the right kind. It isn't lasting. You'll get tired of me. You won't love me when I'm old."

"The end of the world may come before then," suggested the young man. "What's the use of borrowing trouble?"

"I can't help it," said the pretty girl. "It makes me very unhappy. I can't make you understand at all. It just shows you don't really care about me. You are just fascinated or something."

"You bet I am," said the young man, heartily. "You have me hypnotized, all right. It may be fascination or whatever you want to call it, but it's the real thing and it's going to last."

"You just say so," argued the pretty girl, tearfully. "You really don't know anything about it."

"Well, if I don't, I'd like to know who does," insisted the young man, darkly. "You just put up that handkerchief and come back here where you were and quit this nonsense. I care awfully for you, and I'm going to keep right on caring and you can't stop me. Is it all right?"

"I suppose so," murmured the pretty girl, with a relieved sigh.

"Only what?" queried the young man after a brief interlude.

The young woman was looking pleadingly into his eyes. "Would you really, truly have fallen in love with me if I had been homely?" she inquired.—Chicago Daily News.

A SEWING MACHINE STORY

"For a sewing machine agent to sell a whole consignment of another company's goods is something unusual," said the young man who smoked. "But that is what I have just done. I did it through the machinations of Mrs. Johnson Potter. Mrs. Potter is honest. She lives up to her word. When she came down to see about getting a machine she said some of the most astonishing things you ever heard come out of a woman's mouth."

"I don't want to rent a machine," she said, "neither do I want to buy one. I simply want to have one sent in for two or three weeks so I can get my spring sewing done. And I don't want to pay anything for it. I have spent all my money for material for new clothes and I have no money left to pay for a machine to make them on. I thought you might let me have one on trial."

"Mrs. Potter's extraordinary candor almost floored me."

"It is the usual supposition," I replied, cautiously, "that when we leave a machine at a house on trial the party intends to buy it eventually."

"I know it is," returned Mrs. Potter, affably, "but you have been in the business long enough to know by this time that half the people who get machines on these terms don't really intend to do any such thing. They simply wish to get the use of a machine for a few weeks free of cost and then send it back on the ground that it is unsatisfactory. The difference between these people and me is that I tell you the truth, and they don't. I don't want to buy, and say so; they don't want to buy, and say they do."

"I told Mrs. Potter that I appreciated her flat-footed honesty."

"But I can't see," said I, "where we come in. What do we get out of the deal?"

"Oh, as to that," said Mrs. Potter, "I intend to try to sell a machine for you. The woman in the flat across the hall is going to buy, and if you will send one of your machines around to the house this afternoon, so I can start right in sewing and show her what excellent work it does before she decides upon something else, I am quite sure I can persuade her to buy of you."

"As soon as Mrs. Potter got through talking I went back and told the manager and his assistants what she had said. We all agreed that Mrs. Potter was a curiosity, but we didn't know what to do with her."

"It is my opinion," said I, "that we ought to let her have a machine as a reward for her unparalleled truthfulness. Of course, I don't take any stock in that yarn of hers about trying to sell a machine for the use of her own. Nevertheless, I think we ought to accommodate her merely as an encouragement of veracity."

"At last I talked the manager around to my way of thinking."

"But don't let her have one of our machines," he said. "Put her off with a renter. She will never know the difference."

"The manager's suggestion fired my brain with a brilliant idea."

"What's the matter," I said, "with letting her have that second-hand affair made by a A. B. C. company that we got the other day in trade? We will never be able to do anything with it, and even if Mrs. Potter should smash it all to pieces we wouldn't be out anything."

"All right," said the manager. "It is your funeral. Fix her out any way you please."

"So Mrs. Potter got her machine."

"We heard nothing from her for three weeks. Then one day she came into the office. She brought seven women with her, and the way they all bowed and scraped and smiled at me actually made me dizzy."

"That machine you sent me is a treasure," said Mrs. Potter. "It does the loveliest work you ever saw in your life. All these ladies say they never saw such tuckings and stitching and hemming, and they have decided to sell their old machines and buy new ones just like it. In fact, I am so pleased with it that I am going to buy one myself, although I can't see how I can afford it just now. We all live in the same building, and would like eight machines sent up to that address this afternoon."

"Mrs. Potter's wholesale order surprised me into an honesty that was outdone only by her own."

"But we do not handle that make of machine," I confessed. "We merely happened to have one on hand. But we can sell you our own machine at the same price."

"Mrs. Potter looked at the other women collectively and individually, and the whole bunch of them shook their heads."

"No," they said, "we don't handle that style of machine. If you don't handle them we will look up somebody who does, much as we should like to deal with you."

"And then, before I could put in another word in favor of our own stock, Mrs. Potter and her seven neighbors had marched out, bound for the headquarters of the rival concern. The manager had been standing nearby and had overheard the whole conversation. As soon as he caught his breath, he did a little figuring for my benefit."

"There's eight machines at $40 apiece gone up the spout," he said. "That comes of your idiotic plan of fooling a customer with a machine made by another company."
